"Oh, it's quite simple," said the traveler. "The married men put their feet on the mat; the single ones don't."

Three Candidates Struggle for Labor Vote

The labor vote is getting the particular attention of the presidential candidates at this time. Above, Calvin Coolidge is seen greeting labor leaders at the White House. He is chatting with T. V. O'Connor (right), former president of the longshoremen's union, and Dan G. Smith (center), head of the switchmen's union. Below, John W. Davis is shaking hands with railroad workers in Chicago. At right, Robert M. La Follette is broadcasting from Washington an appeal for labor support.

By JOHN T. LEWING Jr., Central Press Correspondent

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Labor is suddenly finding itself the most important factor in the presidential campaign. The candidates themselves, not labor, are making this true.

All the energies of the candidates are directed at this time toward the man with the lunch pail. "Let me fill it for you," all are crying.

In Washington Mr. Coolidge invites the labor leader to the White House to chat and shake hands with him, and his managers announce confidently that he'll get his share of labor's vote. In Chicago, wherever he happens to be, John W. Davis' shake hands with any and all railroad workers and other laboring men he happens upon, while his adherents pronounce their judgment that labor's vote cannot be "delivered" away from the Democratic party's front door.

In Washington Mr. La Follette makes radio appeals for support, and the "green elements back of him announce that labor is solidly for La Follette.

So the battle rages. Labor Bloc a Myth Despite the endorsement given the La Follette movement by directors of the American Federation of Labor, there is no indication that the labor vote can be "delivered" to the La Follette-Wheeler ticket. Labor leaders themselves say so. It never has been demonstrated that the labor vote can be "delivered" collectively to any party. For a long time the laboring man has been given a Democratic label but the G. O. P. has always an appreciable share of the labor ballot.

C.-C. M. O. Nine Meets Piston Crew Sunday

Game scheduled for 2:30 at Home Grounds of Oil Team

The Chancellor-Carfield Midway Oil nine, for the first time in several weeks, will be back on the home diamond Sunday, Sept. 14, for a game with the "Kant Skore" Pistons, a fast-stepping semi-pro club who will no doubt give Eddie Copeland's ballgamers a hard run for their money.

This is the "Kant Skore's" first appearance around the beach towns this season and, as a new club always draws well, there should be more than the usual turnout to witness this fracas. The game will be played at the C.-C. M. O. park, located south of the Redondo boulevard, and is scheduled to start promptly at 2:30.
